Ariel's practice focuses on complex civil litigation, international arbitration, internal investigations and compliance, and white collar defense and government investigations.

Prior to joining Larson, Ariel completed a two-year federal court clerkship at the United States District Court for the District of Utah. During his clerkship Ariel became deeply familiar with the pace, processes, and stages of a first-impression court.

Ariel graduated from law school in 2022 at the University of California at Berkeley, School of Law, where he focused his studies on criminal law and complex civil litigation matters. During law school, Ariel served as a co-editor-in-chief for the La Raza Law Journal, a board member for La Alianza, and a captain for the Berkeley Law Football Team. Ariel also graduated from the University of Utah where he received an honors degree in Business Management with a minor in Ethnic Studies.

In his free time, Ariel likes to run, bike, hike, and – when the weather permits – ski.
